Appeal

In recent years we have seen the effects of deregulated markets: they create one crisis after another. In particular, the financial markets serve the global elite to make it richer and more powerful at the expense of others. And the banks play along.

The majority of people remain excluded from prosperity and must cope with welfare cuts, wars, climate change and environmental disasters. Some live in abundance; others fight for survival.

This must not continue. We can change it – if we unite and work together. The vision of a better world is alive. It was shown in the Arab Spring and the Occupy movement. These great new dynamics have inspired our new civic coalition, "We Need Alternative Banks!".

The main objectives of our financial market policy agenda are to regulate the financial markets and to make the banks serve the people. We know the financial industry is involved in unethical business practices worldwide. Many banks are known as “hunger makers” for their speculation in agricultural commodities. They are also known as “hawks” because of their financing of weapons deals. It is not enough to stop the worst excesses of the banks. It is necessary that they change their business model.
